Overview
As a public transport professional, it is important to understand the development and use of policy and regulation.

After completing this course, you will understand the context within which policy and regulation occurs, and be familiar with the terminology, principles, methods, and issues involved.

Course Structure
This a blended learning course, involving pre-work, which includes background readings and reflection activities, prior to attending the intensive 1½ day short course. The online pre-work has been designed to help you get the most out of the course.

Who should attend?
- Professionals involved in planning, designing and monitoring passenger transport, especially state and local government staff, operators, consultants and contractors
- Professionals new to public transport or wanting a refresher, as well as those wanting a broader understanding of public transport.

Presented by:
Dr David Bray is an adjunct Associate Professor at the School of Civil Engineering at UQ. He has worked in government, and as a consultant to governments and international development agencies, and as a researcher. He has worked in 24 countries in Asia, the Pacific and the Middle East. He specialises in transport policy, economics and planning.
