Overview
An effective and efficient public transport system is a key part Australia’s continued economic growth, environmental health and social well-being.

To enable public transport to contribute to Australia’s sustainable development in a constrained fiscal environment, there will be increasing pressure on appraisal of public transport investment programs.

This course will provide you with knowledge of current approaches to developing and appraising business cases for public transport infrastructure and services.

Course Structure
This a blended learning course, involving pre-work, which includes background readings and reflection activities, prior to attending the intensive 1½ day short course. The online pre-work has been designed to help you get the most out of the course.

Who should attend?
- Professionals involved in planning, designing and monitoring public transport, especially state and local government staff, operators, consultants and contractors
- Professionals new to public transport or wanting a refresher, as well as those wanting a broader understanding of public transport.

Presented by:
Phil Charles is Professor of Transport in the School of Civil Engineering at the University of Queensland. He has developed and implemented transport strategy and policy initiatives across Australia and has considerable experience in road safety, traffic management, public transport, and professional capability development.
